Knowledge Base

I created a knowledge base on George Washington which was sourced from the internet. I started with a URL from a biography website on Washington, and my program crawled through relevant URLs and recorded them in a file. Afterwards, my program scraped the text from each URL in the file and saved the text from each URL to a new file. The program then processed the text from each file, removing unnecessary characters and lines (first and last 5 lines) and recorded the processed text to a new file. The program then combined all lines from all files and obtained the word frequency of each word. Based on my domain knowledge, I noted the ten most relevant frequent words to be added to my knowledge base. The knowledge base is a dictionary that holds a relevant frequent word as its key and a list of sentences as its value. The program cycled through all sentences and if a sentence included George or Washington as well as the relevant frequent word, then the sentence was added to the corresponding key list in the knowledge base.

The ten frequent relevant terms in this knowledge base are:
